

Company presentation ZonderaCom AB

We help companies and organisations in getting more satisfied customers and employees by performing attitude surveys and taking measures as a consequence of the results. ZonderaCom participate in the organizational development work. ZonderaCom AB was founded in 1998 and is located centrally in Stockholm

Measure engagement, well-being and attitudes

Working with attitude studies is a necessity in the development of an organization. The aim is to map out possible problems so that measures can be taken in time. The result will be more satisfied employees and customers. Some parts of an organization changes faster than other parts. We perform our surveys where they are needed the most

Make continuous measurements

The world around us changes. Many people experience that the need for measuring the "soft values" in figures increases. The figures are used for setting up and tracking goals. We would like to help you in that process.

Measuring on the Internet

The process with creating the survey should be handled in a fast and effective manner to be topical and correct - especially when performing several surveys per year. We use the Internet and complement with paper surveys when it is necessary.

ZonderaCom offers

We offer both consulting services and Internet services to carry through attitude research and measures to achieve more satisfied employees and customers.

Consulting services

Our consultants can help you with defining the purpose and aim, designing the survey and carrying it through. The material gets analysed and presented in a report with conclusions and recommendations for measures. Each department can subsequently proceed with continuous surveys.

Internet services

We carry through the surveys using our Internet services. Statistics are presented directly in the web browser. The results can also be made available to respondents and other interested parties. You can also export data into Excel.

Organizational development

With the employee satisfaction survey as a starting point, a present situation is established. We then participate in your work towards your desired level. The organizational consultants from ZonderaCom facilitate the development on both group and individual level.
